Engine. 1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a process for producing a mold which is suitable for forming magnetic thin films having improved corrosion resistance or a magnetic thin film having good chemical resistance. More particularly, it relates to a process for producing a mold which is suitable for forming a magnetic thin film having a high degree of reproducibility on a substrate having an irregular shape. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, a magnetic thin film formed by sputtering has been used in a magnetic recording medium such as a hard disk or in a thin film coil for a magnetic head. In this field, a higher performance has recently been demanded. For example, a recording medium having high coercive force has been demanded, which is required in order to improve the recording density. A higher sensitivity of a magnetic head has been demanded, which is required in order to realize a higher recording density. For this purpose, a magnetic thin film composed of an amorphous alloy containing iron, such as an amorphous alloy composed of iron, chromium and aluminum (Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 54-141928), a magnetic thin film composed of an amorphous alloy containing aluminum and at least one element selected from among nickel, cobalt, manganese, tung 82157476af
